

Archeology Month Celebrated Throughout March In Arkansas

Arkansas Archeology Month, an annual celebration of Arkansas's prehistoric and historic past, will be held the entire month of March. Cosponsored by the Arkansas Archeological Survey and the Arkansas Archeological Society, Archeology Month will be celebrated at museums, libraries and parks throughout the state.

This year's theme is "Archeology of Conflict," which ties in with the first year of the Civil War sesquicentennial. Archeology Month activities may focus on the theme or explore other features of Native American and pioneer life. Some 34 different activities, including exhibits, slide shows, workshops, demonstrations, open houses and other activities, will be held throughout the state. Many of the activities are free to the public.

Area events include the following.

—Lake Dardanelle State Park, "The Trail Where They Cried," March 12 and 26, 11:30 a.m. Sasha Bowles, park interpreter, will discuss the Trail of Tears and explore the role of the park and its surrounding area in this dark era of American history.

—Petit Jean State Park, Archeology Day, March 12, 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Join Petit Jean State Park interpreters for programs throughout the day devoted to better understanding the park's archeological treasures and valuable heritage, including the pictographs of Rock House Cave.

A complete schedule of events, which includes late additions, is available on the Arkansas Archeological Survey's Web site at www.uark.edu/campus-resources/archinfo/archmonth.html, or a printed brochure can be obtained free at state parks, libraries, museums and regional offices of the Arkansas Archeological Survey.
